

Rival Polo Teams in Lively Practice

Challenging Four, Without Captain Cheape, Plays a Clever Game.

SHOW WELL IN THEIR FIRST PLAY HERE

Final Make-Up of the American Team To Be Announced by H. L. Herbert To-day.

In the red and green colors of the Quindones, winners of the championship cup at season at Hurlingham, the British challenges for the international polo cup at a team made up of two Americans, the Duke de Penneranda and Captain Lockett yesterday, in their first polo game on Long Island, by 4 goals to 4.

Captain Cheape was not in the line-up of the challengers, owing to the death of his sister, Mrs. C. P. Cay, who was lost on the ill-fated Empress of Ireland. Lord Wimborne said he would play in the next practice, however, and in the match, as Captain Cheape thought it his duty to do so.

The play was on the No. 2 Meadow Brook field, and did not begin until the sixth period of the practice game of the American team candidates was over. In this the Whites, playing in what has been termed for some days the final formation, beat a strong Red team by 19 goals to 6.

Rene La Montagne was No. 1 for the winners, J. M. Waterbury, Jr., No. 2, Devereux Milburn No. 3 and L. Waterbury back.

H. L. Herbert, chairman of the Polo Association, was at Meadow Brook, and made the official announcement of the team and substitutes would be made this morning at his office.

Lord Wimborne and his party watched the defenders play until they had to start their own match. There were two thousand onlookers, including many women, to see the games, and nearly all deserted the No. 1 stands to watch the British players.

The men who saw the start of one and the whole of the second game, which only went to seven periods, included W. A. Hazard, August Belmont, H. M. Harrison, Louis E. Stoddard, James Farley, E. P. Burke, of California; Samuel Willets, Stanley Mortimer, C. H. Robbins, H. S. Page, Irving Brook, T. Hitchcock, John A. Rawlins, John E. Cowdin, Richard Peters, Foxhall P. Keene and E. S. von Stade.

H. L. Whitney was delighted at the showing of the Whites. When a friend called to him that Pennant had won at Belmont Park, and added, "That's what our polo team will do," Mr. Whitney's only reply was a smile and a wave of the hand.

The challengers who played were Major Tomkinson, Lord Wimborne, Captain Barrett and J. A. Traill, while the positions of the White team to oppose them were filled as named, by the Duke de Penneranda, J. Watson Webb, C. P. Beadleston and Captain Lockett.

The Quindones, although they had never played as a team before, displayed a mastery of the game after the early periods.

At the start the misses were more frequent than clean hits, but in the last three periods the visitors showed themselves snappy hitters, and displayed excellent team tactics.

J. A. Traill and Lord Wimborne were the chief goal makers, each accounting for three, while Captain Barrett and Traill were the fighters of the four.

The ponies proved to be a nimble and well trained lot, but not the marvels in speed that some had expected to see. Beadleston and Webb, who rode their own ponies, as a rule held the British opponent safe in the races for the ball, which is the crucial test of speed at polo.

The Quindones, as well as Captain Lockett and the Duke de Penneranda, held their mallet shafts loosely and swung usually once as a preliminary stroke before making the real hit. They sat well down in their saddles and straight, when balancing for a hit, which is a mannerism that costs quickness, and has been made familiar here by preceding challenging teams.

They were quick and accurate at stick-work in meeting the ball and seemed to hit at all angles neatly.

Beadleston and Webb made between them four of the five goals gained by their side.

In riding off and hooking they held their own fairly well. Traill's goals were made when he went up as No. 1.

The Duke de Penneranda could not often get past Barrett and Traill. His one goal was by a short hit on a ball Webb had placed for him with three strokes and a ride from middle field. Then he was stopped by Barrett, and the duke had an opportunity. Captain Lockett seemed a stronger back than Traill, but as the game brought the latter so much among the forwards the comparative test was hardly a fair one.

It was an excellent showing for the first appearance with a new formation and in a new land.

The results follow:

RED TEAM.—J. M. Waterbury (4), J. A. Traill (3), J. Watson Webb (3), Captain Lockett (3), J. A. Traill (3), J. Watson Webb (3), Captain Lockett (3).

WHITE TEAM.—Rene La Montagne (4), J. M. Waterbury (3), Devereux Milburn (2), L. Waterbury (2), J. A. Traill (2), J. Watson Webb (2), Captain Lockett (2).

Alec Brown, captain of the Bryn Mawr Polo Club, was No. 1 on the Blues to oppose the American team, with C. C. Ramsey, Malcolm Stevenson and H. C. Phipps in the other positions. Honors were even at two goals all for the first period, but Brown was penalized a fair for a foul score.

After that the Whites forged to the front, displaying a game that could not fall to the confidences with which

IT'S ON AGAIN, OFF AGAIN

Ritchie-Welsh Match Declared No Go by Emil Thier.

The match between Willie Ritchie, lightweight champion of the world, and Freddie Welsh, the British champion, is off. The men cannot agree on a referee or a stakeholder.

Emil Thier, representing Ritchie, and Bob Vernon, representing the Olympic Club of London, met yesterday afternoon to arrange the details. Vernon wanted George Considine to hold the stakes, while Thier insisted upon Billy Gibson or Bob Edgren. Vernon refused to consider either. Then Thier demanded that Eugene Corri referee the match, and when Vernon would not concede this point, left for Chicago, declaring the whole affair off.

There will be a special entertainment held at the New Polo A. C. to-night.

PENNANT RUNS A SMASHING RACE

Beats Strong Field in Fast Time for One Mile and a Sixteenth.

BUSKIN THIRD AFTER A SLOW BEGINNING

Futurity Winner Makes His Bow for the Season in Way to Stamp Him a Great Horse.

(By Herbert Dabry.)

H. P. Whitney's Pennant, winner of the Futurity last year and unbeaten as a two-year-old, made his racing bow at Belmont Park yesterday by winning the Little Neck Handicap, at one mile and a sixteenth, in most impressive fashion.

It may be rather early in the season to say that Mr. Whitney owns the greatest horse of the year, but barring accidents it will take a mighty good horse to heat him at anything like even weights.

Pennant is a chestnut horse by Peter Pan-Royal Rose, and closely resembles his sire, which raced with such distinction several years ago in the white, blue and dots of the late James R. Keene. The then vice-champion of the Jockey Club stood on the roof of the Sheephead Bay stand one day as Peter Pan raced to victory, and remarked:

"Pennant is a good horse, a real good horse, and one who will be remembered for years by his get if he lives."

Mr. Keene's prophecy is more than coming true.

Pennant took up 111 pounds yesterday and concealed weight, according to the scale, to some good horses, including Buskin, an added starter, which won the Metropolitan Handicap on the opening day of the meeting. He beat them, too, in a way which left no question of his quality, and ran the mile and a sixteenth in the fast time of 1:45, only two-fifths of a second behind the track record, established by Supermam in 1907.

It was his manner of racing and winning, however, which pleased all true lovers of the thoroughbred. He jumped off in front and set the pace up the backstretch with his mouth wide open. He held his
